ABSTRACT

Approximately 275 Federal programs support some form of lifelong learning. While the majority of the lifelong learning programs are administered by the various agencies within HEW, a significant number of programs are run by such Federal agencies as the Department of Justice, the National Foundation on the Arts and Humanities, and the Smithsonian Institution. For the purpose of this compilation, a Federal program supporting lifelong learning was defined as one that served all types of students past compulsory age through the provision of educational and training services. Such services must benefit individuals directly. The listing includes the Office of Management and Budget's (OMB) catalog number and the overseeing House and Senate Committees. (JMF)

Federal Programs Supporting

Lifelong Learning

Approximately 275 Federal programs support some form of lifelong learning, according to the 1976 edition of the Office of Management and Budget's Catalog of Federal Domestic Assistance. These programs are dispersed throughout 22 Cabinet-level departments and agencies. While the majority of the lifelong learning programs are administered by the various agencies within HEW, a significant number of these programs are run by such Federal agencies as the Department of Justice, the National Foundation on the Arts and Humanities and the Smithsonian Institution.

For the purpose of this compilation, a Federal program supporting lifelong learning was defined as one which served all types of students past compulsory age through the provision of educational and training services. Such services must benefit individuals directly, thus eliminating those few Federal programs which only provide mass mailings of information or indirect counseling. The attached list of Federal lifelong learning programs was assembled largely from the 1976 Catalog of Federal Domestic Assistance compiled by the Office of Management and Budget (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1976). Research for the list was also based on past research sponsored by the National Center for Education Statistics (Christoffel and Greenberg, A Compilation of Federal Programs Financing Post-secondary Education: An Update; Fall 1974) which was prepared by the Washington Office of the College Entrance Examination Board. The identification of responsible House and Senate Committees was derived from an unpublished listing prepared by the Library of Congress, Congressional Research Service and generously shared by Robert Andringa, Minority Staff Director, House Education and Labor Committee. Selection of programs for inclusion in this listing was done without contacting the responsible Federal Agency, for the most part. The programs have been included on the basis of published information, however, which identifies them as having lifelong learning components. It should be noted that at the present time (August 1976) a number of these programs are undergoing Congressional review. Program titles and authorities may well be changed after this date as a result of Congressional action.

It is interesting to compare this 1976 lifelong learning program list with a similar list prepared in 1972 by the National Advisory Council on Extension and Continuing Education for their 7th Annual Report (A Measure of Success: Federal Support for Continuing Education). While the definitions for program inclusion differ slightly, the two lists overlap to a great extent.

In comparing the programs on these lists over the four year period, it is evident that HEW continues to sponsor the majority of the relevant Federal efforts in this area. In fact HEW support grew substantially over this period, with much of the program growth appearing in the health training area. The National Science Foundation has consolidated and slightly reduced its support. Programs formerly operated by the Atomic Energy Commission are now the responsibility of the new Energy Research and Development Administration. The Department of Defense remains a major sponsor of lifelong learning through both its in-service education programs and its support of Civil Defense training.

The most significant aspect of the programs on the new listing is their dispersion among responsible Federal agencies and Congressional committees. There is no single center in the Federal bureaucracy responsible for any overview of these lifelong learning programs. Moreover, with 16 separate full committees responsible for legislation affecting these programs in both the House and Senate (plus the Joint Atomic Energy Committee), there is no one focus of attention on Capitol Hill.

Dr. Norman Kurland of the New York State Department of Education provided invaluable advice in the preparation of this listing.
